

To Whom it May Concern,

As an American Citizen I am very concerned about the concentration of the Media. As I understand it in recent years the FCC has relaxed regulation having to do with media consolidation. Naturally this makes sense with the advent of new electronic communication technologies and more channels for more voices to be heard.

I hope the FCC won't take this too far though. It recently came to my attention that the FCC is considering allowing companies to own both a TV station and Newspaper in the same geographic area. I believe multiple sources for local information is very important and the FCC should consider these options with the greatest hesitation and reluctance.

I fear that media consolidation will mean an increasingly corporate agenda for news in this country. This would not be a problem except that at times the corporate slant of some media outlets is not in the publics best interest. May the common good and Democracy prevail. Thank you.

A Concerned Citizen,

Todd Lisonbee